© rasailojaraid.com ملی و تحقق مجله نقداسلای (۲۰۱۶) هندنور ۲۰۱۲ هندنور ۲۰۱۲ هندنور ۲۰۱۲ هندنور ۲۰۱۲ هندنور ۲۰۱۲ هندنور ۲۰۱۲ هندنور

within the domain of theology, they do not come within the purview of our discussion.⁹⁴

Al-Shātibī does not discuss miracles or the concept of ismah to prove the authority. of Sunnah. He discusses ten Our'anic verses which, according to him, are enough to establish the legal authority of the Sunnah. These verses are quoted by some other fugaha' as well. However, one verse, from Sūrah al-Qalam, which is particularly mentioned by al-Shātibī, may be cited here: "Surely [O Muhammad,] you are of a tremendous character.95 When asked about the behaviour of the Prophe (p.b.u.h.), 'A' ishah said that the Qur'an was his character, that he put the Our'an into practice and action, and that this is preserved in the form of Sunnah. 46 Al-Shātibī relates two sets of ahadith to establish the authority of the Sunnah. The ahadith which utterly condemn the negligence of the Sunnah and those which enjoin the Muslims to follow the Sunnah⁹⁷ The hadīth of Mu'ādh b. Jabal in which the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) directed him to settle the matters according to the Our'an, the Sunnah and ijtihād bi al-rā'y, is very important to al-Shātibī concerning the authority of the Sunnah.98

Finally it would be relevant to mention the statement of lbn Hajar al-'Asqalānī as regards the position of the Sunnah in the Islamic Sharī'ah. He writes: "The 'ulamā', who are respected and followed by the people, are agreed that the Sunnah is an independent source of legal decision". 99 Ibn Hajar supports this statement by referring to the Qur'ān and the hadāth.

In the light of the foregoing discussion it may be concluded that the authoritative character of Sunnah was well established and it had been regarded as prescriptive source of the Sharī ah by the Companions including the Rāshidūn Khulafā.

⁴¹bid. 1, 242-44.

⁹⁵Qur'ãn 68;4.

^{*}Al-Shātibī, al-Muwāfaqāt, vol. 4, 9-10.

⁹⁷lbid. 10-11.

^{}Al-Shātibī, al-Muwāfagāt, vol. 4, 6-12.

[&]quot;Ibn Hajar, Hady al-Sāri, vol. 1, 5.

© rasailojaraid.com وم الحرام المسلمة فوبر ١٠٠١ وم الحرام المسلمة فوبر ١٠٠١ وم الحرام المسلمة فوبر ١٠٠١ وم

علمي وتخفيقي مجلّه فقهاسلامي

accepting the Sunnah based on ahad.90 In support of the Sunnah of ahad, al-Ghazali's reasoning was as follows: the judgments of the judges and fatāwa of the fuqahā' are based on probable knowledge and not on absolute and certain knowledge, but they are still binding and regarded as a source of knowledge; hence the same is the case with the Sunnah which is also binding like those judgements and fatāwa.91

Al-Ghazālī compares the certainty of the sunnah of tawatur to the certainty of a person, who is far away from the Haram, about the direction of the Ka'bah. When he is unable to know with certainty the exact direction of the Ka'bah, he applied his senses, observing the signs of nature, and exercises ijtihad to determine the direction of the Ka'bah. Whichever be the direction he is satisfied with, he is obliged to face. Though his knowledge of the direction of Ka'bah is not certain, he is enjoined to follow the result of his ijtihad. Likewise the Sunnah of ahad is also obligatory.92

Al-Āmidī also discusses the Sunnah as the second source of law. He goes in detail to prove the authority of the Sunnah by discussing the Our'anic verses, ahadath of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) and the practice of the Companions. 93 Before mentioning these three arguments, al-Amidi raises the issue of 'ismah of the Messengers. It seems from his discussion that he wants to prove 'ismah in order to establish the authority of the Sunnah. He refers to the view of the jumhur mutakallimun that all Messengers are protected by Allah from grave sin, or from action contradicting their own teaching. Minor mistakes (khata) and forgetfulness (nisyan), according to him, do not affect 'ismah. He also mentions the differences between the scholars and their different interpretations of 'ismah, but since they fall [&]quot;Al-Ghazālī, al-Mustasfā, vol. 1, 148-52; Ibn Qudāmah, Rawdat al-Nāzir, 53-56.

[&]quot;Al-Ghazālī, al-Mustasfā, vol. 1, 147.

⁹²¹bid.

[&]quot;Al-Ā midī, al-Ihkām, vol. 1, 251-54.

recognised it as an original source of the Sharī'ah, only second to the Qur'an. 86 Al-Bazdawi, for example, mentions the legal authority of the Sunnah and explains its gradations and degrees of reliability. He seems so certain about the legal validity of the Sunnah that he did not need to establish its authority. For instance, he just discusses the classifications of the Sunnah and how it constitutes rules of law. 87 Al-Ghazālī, however, argues to establish the authority of the Sunnah before discussing its role. He mentions three points. First, the statements of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) are hujjah because the reliability and truthfulness of the Messenger was proved by miracles he performed. Second, the Muslims are commanded by Allah to follow the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) and obey him. Third, the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) told the people only what he received through the revelation from Allah.88 Ibn Qudamah also upholds the same arguments.89

The fuquhā' not only accept the Sunnah which has been established by hadāh mutawātir or mashhūr but they accept ahād as well. The Sunnah mutawatirah ensures certainty, and its authority is like the authority of the nass of the Qur'ān. Though the Sunnah established by means of āhād does not give absolute certainty, it does nevertheless contain the source of the most probable knowledge. Al-Ghazālī and Ibn al-Qayyim produce evidence from the practice of the Companions who upheld the binding role of Sunnah. They mention examples that the Companions consulted the wives of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) and were aware of his Sunnah. Abū Bakr and 'Umar, for example, asked the wives of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) on several matters and accepted what they were told of the practice of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) by his wife or Companions. Both fuquhā', al-Ghazālī and Qudāmah refer the consensus of the Companions on ⁸⁶Al-Āmidī, al-Iḥkām, vol. 1, 231; Ibn Ilazm, al-Iḥkām, vol. 1, 87; al-Ghazātī, al-Mustas/ā vol. 1, 129; Alī b. Muḥammad al-Bazdawī. Kanz al-Wuṣūt, (Karachi: Nūr Muḥammad, n.d.) 149.

^{*7}Al-Bazdawī, Kanz al-Wuṣūl, 149

^{}Al-Ghazālī, al-Mustasfā, vol. 1, 129.

^{}Ibn Qudāmah, Rawdat al-Nāzir 46.

through reliable sources.⁸² When the hadūh was proved to be authentic he changed his view.⁸³

Another example of the importance of the written records of the Sunnah affecting the decision of the fugahā' can be found in their discussion of the role of the Amīr. The fugahā' consider that the Amīr is the most deserving person to lead the prayer, and during his presence no one else can lead the prayer unless he is permitted to do so by the Amīr, even if the congregational prayer is held in a private house.84 The presence of the Amīr or his deputy, is likewise a requirement for the validity of the Friday prayer, and it is to be led by the Amir or his deputy.85 The Hanafi fuquhā' do not present any evidence in support of this view from the nass (textual reference from the Our'an or the hadath). However, it is clear from historical records that this was the practice at the time of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.). He himself was the leader of the prayer, and also his appointed governors, or whomever the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) designated for this purpose, had led the prayers. This practice also continued uninterrupted throughout the Rashidun period. This practical Sunnah which was followed by the Rāshidūn Khulafa', became the source for the Hanafi fugaha' who considered the presence of the Amīr as a necessary element in the Friday prayer, and for the other fugaha' who, in the presence of the Sultan gave him precedence in leading the prayer.

Thus, the practice of the $R\bar{a}shid\bar{u}n$ $Khulaf\bar{a}$, and their emphasis on following the Sunnah was imitated by the $fuqah\bar{a}$. They applied the Sunnah more systematically as an original source of fiqh to settle the legal questions that arose in their daily life.

The later fuquhā also acknowledge the authenticity of the Sunnah as a source of law, and the authors of usūl al-fiqh

^{*2[}bn Hazm, al-Muhallā, vol. 6, 11.

^{*\}Ibid. 16.

^{*1} Al-Shāfi ī al-Risālah, vol. 1, 157.

^{*} Al-Sarakhsi, al-Mahsüt, vol. 2, 23-25; Ibn al-Humām, Sharh Fath al-Qadīr, vol. 2, 54.

would look first to the Qur'an and then also to the Sunnah fer guidance. The Sunnah was referred to by the fugahā' as a legal source in the same manner as it was done by ul-Khulafā ul-Rāshidūn. Just as with the Rāshidūn Khulafā', the fugahā' would withdraw their own opinion when they came across hadith of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) contradicting their views. For example, Imam al-Shāfi'ī had reportedly said that if anything he had written was found to be contrary to the Sunnah, then the people should reject his opinion and follow the Sunnah. Al-Shāfi'ī admitted that whenever he found the hadith on any aspect of figh on which he had already expressed his opinion, and which was not identical with the hadith, then he simply withdrew his own view and accepted the Sunnah. 79 An example of this approach can be found in the treatment of the question of who is eligible to receive zakāh. The Qur'ān mentions eight categories of recipients of zakāh; 80 among them is included those who are travelling (fī sabīl Allah) to perform hajj or to participate in jihād. The verse in the Qur'ān is general (mutlag), and includes. all those who travel for these purposes, whether they are rich or poor. The fugahā' from the ahnāf, however, restricted the verse to the poor on the basis of the hadith which states that: "The zakāh should be taken from the rich of the Muslims and be returned to their poor".81

Yet another example of this approach is in al-Muhalla. Ibn Hazm withdraws his own views when he finds the hadīth of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) contradicting them. Discussing the niṣāb of the cow (minimum number of cattle liable for zukāh), for example, Ibn Hazm gave his own opinion of what he thought it was before the hadīth narrated by Masrūq had reached him ⁷⁹Ibid. vol. 4, 233.

[™]Our'an 9: 60.

^{*1}Mahmūd al-Bābartī, Sharḥ al- Ināyah, on the margin of Sharḥ Fatḥ al-Qadīr (Bulaq, 1315 A.H.) vol. 2, 18.

€ < A è

علمى وتحقيق مجله فقه اسلامي

event has been mentioned by the muhaddithūn and historians. No one is reported to have objected to the conditions, either from the ahl al-hall wa al-aqd, or from the common people. Ahmad b. Hanbal's reference to this tradition indicated that the practice of the Sunnah was well established, and that there was consensus among the Companions to follow the Sunnah. This was exactly what Abū Bakr had declared after being chosen as Khalīfah: "O people, I have been chosen as Khalīfah over you though I am not the best among you...Follow me as long as I follow Allah and His Messenger (p.b.u.h.); but if I disobey Allah and His Messenger, you, then, have no obligation to obey me".75

Later Hanbalī fuqahā; like Ibn Taymiyyah and Ibn Qayyim al-Jawziyyah, also lay great stress on the importance of following the Sunnah. In this connection, Ibn Taymiyyah refers to the Qur'ān, the ahādāh of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) and the practice of the Companions, particularly to the practice and understanding of 'Umar b. al-Khaṭtāb. According to Ibn Taymiyyah, the Qur'ān and the Sunnah are quite sufficient for dealing with any situation. Ibn al-Qayyim gives reasons for the legal authority of the Sunnah and discusses several situations being dealt with by reference to the Sunnah alone, where the Book of Allah is silent.

In the first section, we have discussed in some detail the position of the Companions and particularly that of $R\bar{a}shid\bar{u}n$ $Khulaf\bar{a}$ with regard to the Sunnah of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.). The attitude of the $fuqah\bar{a}$ in the succeeding generation of Muslims was no different from that of the $R\bar{a}shid\bar{u}n$ $Khulaf\bar{a}$. They followed the $R\bar{a}shid\bar{u}n$ $Khulaf\bar{a}$ in their acceptance of the Sunnah, and referred to this source and authority in the settlement of legal questions. Like the $R\bar{a}shid\bar{u}n$ $Khulaf\bar{a}$ they ⁷⁴Al-Tabarī, Tārīkh, vol. 3, 210; Ibn Sa'd, al-Tabagāt, vol. 3, 129.

⁷⁶Ibn Taymiyyah, Fatāwa Ibn Taymiyyah (Makkah al-Mukarramah, 1399 A.H.) vol., 19, 174-75.

[&]quot;Ibid, 176.

[&]quot;thn al-Qayyim, I'lam, vol. 2, 288-90.

Although the Qur'an does not mention any other condition, Al-Shāfi'ī prohibits widows from using perfume and make-up during this period on the grounds of certain hadūth.⁷⁰

Ahmad b. Hanbal (d.241 A.H.) was perhaps one of the most strict of the classical fugahā' in following the Sunnah. To him, the Sunnah, is an indispensable source of the Islamic Shari ah. 11 He did not pay great attention to figh, since he was basically a muhaddith (traditionist). His position as a fugih is disputed, but the Hanbalites insist that he held an eminent position in figh as well. He always tried his best to base his opinion on a hadith, even if it is weak. He compiled the book of hadith as Musnad, in which he emphasises the importance and nature of the Sunnah. For example, he states the hadith, on the authority of 'A'ishah, that the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) established the Sunnah of doing Sa'y between Safa and Marwah; hence his conclusion that therefore, no one should cease to do Sa'y between them. 72 He also mentions the hadith, on the authority of 'Imran b. Husayn, that the Our'an was revealed and the Sunnah was established by the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) which the Companions had preserved, and that we could go astray if we failed to follow them. 73 Ahmad b. Hanbal demonstrates the binding legal validity of the Sunnah by mentioning such ahādāth.

Another tradition worth noting is Ahmad b. Ḥanbal narrates that Abū Wā'il asked 'Abd al-Raḥmān b. 'Awf why he offered bay'ah to 'Uthmān and not to 'Alī. 'Abd al-Raḥmān b. 'Awf said that it was 'Alī's mistake. He first offered his allegiance to 'Alī on the condition that he would follow the Book of Allah, the Sunnah of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) and the siyar of Abū Bakr and 'Umar. 'Alī said that he would follow what he could. 'Abd al-Raḥmān, then, offered bay'ah to 'Uthman who accepted the conditions stipulated by him.⁷⁴ This historical ⁷⁶Al-Shāfi'ī, Al-Risālah, 97.

⁷¹Abū Zuhrah, Ahmad b. Ḥanbal, (Dār al-l'ikr al- Arabī, 1367/1947) 220.

⁷²Ahmad b. Hanbal, Musnad, vol. 6, 144.

⁷³lbid. vol. 1, 75.

⁷⁴Al-Tabarī, Tārīkh, vol. 3, 210; Ibn Sa'd, al-Tabaqāt, vol. 3, 129.

from Allāh, although it is not recited like the Qur ān. However, its authority is above any doubt; the people are obliged to follow it. Some of the Qur'ānic verses are very clear; they direct the people to follow (ittibā') and obey (itā ah) the Messenger. 66 Al-Shāfi'ī interprets the word al-hikmah in the Qur'ān as referring to the Sunnah, while al-Kitāb means the Qur'ān. He discusses seven Qur'ānic verses in which al-Kitāb and al-Hikmah occur together. 67

Al-Shāfi'ī not only emphasises the necessity of following the Sunnah on rational grounds, but also refers to the hadith as a corroborating authority according to Shari ah requirements. He gives many good examples in his al-Umm, which is a comprehensive treatise on figh. For example, he does not approve of the sale of fruits before they have clearly begun to ripen on the basis of hadith which he quotes. 68 On the question of determining the age of hulugh (sexual maturity), he depends on the hadith, stated on the authority of 'Abd Allah b. 'Umar, which says that Muslims are held responsible for their actions and are obliged to follow the Shari ah after they have reached the age of bulugh. The exact year of bulugh is, however, disputed because people reach puberty at different ages. Al-Shāfī'ī argues on the basis of liculīth that 'Abd Allah b. 'Umar offered himself at Ulnud to participate in jihād—he was fourteen at that time but he was not allowed to go to war. He again, sought the permission of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) to fight at Khandaq, when he was permitted because he was then fifteen. On the basis of this hadāh al-Shāfi'ī determines the age of bulugh as being 15 years.49

Another example concerns the remarriage of widows. The Qur'an prescribes the waiting period ('iddah) of four months and ten days for a woman whose husband passed away.

[&]quot;Ibid. 46-51.

bilbid. 44-45, see also the Qur'āṇie verses, al-Baqarah 2: 129, 151, 231; Āl-ˈlmrān.
164; al-Nisā' 4: 113; al-Alzāb 33; 34; al-Jumu ah 62:2.

⁶⁸ Al-Shāti ī, al-Umm, vol. 3, 83.

[&]quot;Ibid. vol.4, 162.

عنمى وتحقيقي مجلّه فقداسلامي

confirmed by the Prophet (p.b.u.h.). He also quotes the letter of 'Umar b. al-Khattab to Qadī Shurayh, in which 'Umar directed him to judge according to the Qur'an and the Sunnah; and the statement of 'Abd Allah b. Mas ūd that anyone who is invested with judicial powers should decide the cases according to the Book of Allah and the Sunnah. He also refers to the practice of 'Abd Allah b. 'Abbas who is reported to have always given futiva' (legal opinion) according to the Qur'an and the Sunnah. 60 With reference to the practices of the Companions, Al-Shātibī quotes the Qur'ānic verses which explain clearly the legal position, including the following verses: "Obey Allah and obey the Messenger and beware [of the consequences of the disobedience of His Messenger]¹¹⁶¹, "Let those who disobey His [Messenger's] orders beware, lest some painful punishment should befall them"62; and, "Whatsoever the Messenger gives you, take it; and whatsoever he forbids you, abstain from it".63 Thus, according to al-Shātibī, the Sunnah has been the source of law not only by virtue of the Qur'anic injunctions, but also because of the practice of the Companions as well. This position is summed up in the well-known hadith, cited by Imam Malik. that the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) had reportedly said that he had left. The Our'an and the Sunnah with the people, that as long as they followed them they would not go astray.64

Imām al-Shāfi'ī, who is probably the first scholar to present the legal principles of figh scientifically, places great emphasis on the Sunnah. He discusses the Sunnah in detail, quoting verses from the Qur'ān [and the ahādūth] in support of the authority of the Sunnah, saying that Allah has commanded men to follow His Book and Sunnah of His Messenger (p.b.u.h.).65 The Sunnah, according to him, is also revealed ⁶⁰ Al-Shāṭibī, al-Muwāfaqāt, vol. 4, 5-6.

⁶¹Qur'an 5: 92.

[&]quot;2Our'an 24: 63."

[&]quot;Qurian 59:7; al-Shatibi, al-Muwafaqat, vol. 4, 10.

[&]quot;Mālik, al-Muwattā', vol. 2, 202.

[&]quot;Al-Shāfi'ī, al-Risālah, 44.

© rasailojaraid.com

· محرم الحرام ۱۳۳۴ اهيئة تومبر ۱۰۱۲ ء

€Ar}

علمي وتحقيق مجلّه فقه اسلامي

it because, according to him, it was not practised by the people of Madīnah. The 'amal' (practice) of the people of Madīnah, thus, became the criterion for the acceptance or rejection of hadith with him.

Al-Muwattā' is Imām Mālik's magnum opus in which he records the 'amal of the people of Madinah in the light of the Sunnah and the practice of the Prophet's Companions to confirm his opinion. There are many examples of how the Sunnah either clarified or complemented what is in the Qur'an. For instance, Mālik relates that Khālid b. Asīd asked 'Abd Allah b. 'Umar whether he found the fear prayer (salāt al-khawf) and the prayer when settled (salāt al-hadar) mentioned in the Our an. He did not find any mention of the travelling prayer in it. 'Abd Allah b. 'Umar said that Allah the Almighty sent to us Muhammad (peace be upon him) as Messenger; we practised as we saw him practising.⁵⁷ Imām Mālik also, for example, states that the killing of women, children and aged people in military expeditions is not permitted. He quotes many ahādīth, the practice of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) and the practice of Abū Bakr and 'Umar to endorse this view.⁵⁸

Similarly, Mālik states that women are permitted to accompany a Muslim army because, at the time of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.), women used to go with him to nurse the sick and the wounded people.⁵⁹

Following Imām Mālik, Al-Shātibī, a prominent Mālikī faqīh, discusses the authority of the Sunnah. He mentions first the practice of the Companions which shows that the Sunnah was considered an indispensable way of behaviour and source of the Shari ah by them. Then he refers to the hadīth of Mu'ādh b. Jabal, which indicates that the Companions understood the legal position of the Sunnah, as was explained by Mu'ādh b. Jabal and [&]quot;Mālik, al-Mudawwanah, vol. 2, 5-6,

[&]quot;Mālik, al-Muwattā vol. 2, 79.

⁵⁷Ibid. 124.

⁶⁸Mālik, al-Mudawwanah al-Kubrā, version of Sahnūn, (Baghdad: Matba'at al-Muthanna, 1970) vol. 2, 6-7; al-Muwattā', vol. 1, 297-98.

meticulous in following the Sunnah. Al-Shāfi'ī says that al-Awza'ī accepted even the hadāth munqati'52 and according to Ibn Hazm, he accepted the mursal hadith as well.⁵³ Al-Awzā'ī explains his views concerning the Shari ah and presents the nass both from the Our'an and the Sunnah. He agrees with Abū Hanīfah that the Friday prayer is not valid without the Sultan or his deputy, or whoever is representing the Imam, since no one can lead the Friday prayer without the permission of the Imam or his designated amīr, as that was the practice at the time of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) and at that of the Rāshidūn Khulafā'. Al-Awzā'ī argues this point from the hadīth reported on the authority of Jābir.54 Al-Awzā'ī always quotes hadīth as hnjjah (proof) of the requirements of the Shari ah rulings on which he expressed his views. Ibn 'Abd al-Barr says that al-Awzā'ī considered following the Sunnah as absolutely necessary in understanding the Qur'an. In other words, the Sunnah to him, was the practical interpretation of the Qur'an, and is inseparable from the Our'an.55

Imām Mālik (d.179 A.H.) and the Mālikī fuqahā' also consider the Sunnah as an indispensable source of fiqh. Mālik only relies on authentic hadīth. He did not question the reliability of the sanad (chain of narrators) if a particular Sunnah was practised by the people of Madīnah while rejecting the hadīth which was not practised by them. For example, take the hadīth, "Both parties in business transactions have the right of withdrawal as long as they have not separated, except in the optional transaction (bay al-khiyar)". The sanad of this hadīth—viz., Mālik from Nālī from 'Abd Allah b, 'Umar from the Messenger of Allah—is a most reliable one, but Mālik rejected ⁵²Al-Shāfi ī, al-Umm, (Beirut: Dār al-Ma'ārif, 1393 A.H.) vol. 7, 342 It is noteworthy that al-Shafi ī does not accept al-hadīth al-munqaţi.

⁵⁵Ibn Hazm, al-Muhalla, (Cairo: Maktabah al-Jumhūriyyah al-Arabiyyah, 1387 A.H.) vol. 2, 256.

³⁴ Abd al-Raḥmān Al-Awzā'ī, Fiqh al-Imām al-Awzā'ī, ed. 'Abd Allah M. al-Jaburī, (Baghdād: Maṭba'ah al-Irshād, '1397 A.H.) vol. 1, 260-61.

⁵⁵Ibn 'Abd al-Barr, Jāmi' Bayān al- Ilm (al-Madīnah al-Munawwarah: Maktabah al-Salafiyyah al-Madinat, 1388 A.H.) vol. 2, 234.

∳ΛΓ﴾

علمى وشحقيق مجلّه فقداسلامي

which he gave his views. 15 He even prefers weak hadith to qivas. 46 According to him, he first consulted the Book of Allah in all eases; if it did not deal with the questions, under discussion, he looked into the Sunnah and only in eases where the Sunnah was also silent he did look to the decisions of the Companions and took guidance from them. He exercised ijtihād only if he failed to find answers from the first three sources. 47 In the preface to his Kitāb al-Kharāj, which Abū Yūsuf (d.182), an eminent Hanafi faqili, and a student of Abū Hanīfah, wrote for the guidance of Khalīfah Hārūn al-Rashīd, emphasizes the significance of the Sunnah in Islamic Shari'ah. Abū Yūsuf points out that during 'Umar's time, the governors were obliged to teach people al-Din and the Sunnah 48 and he quotes ahādīth in support of his emphasis on the Sunnah. On the distribution of ghanimah (booty), for example, he relates the hadith, which tells of the practice of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) concerning it.49 His entire work is replete with ahadith in support of his thesis. Muhammad b. al-Hasan al-Shaybani (d.185 A.H.), another eminent faqih of the Hanafi school, also follows the Sunnah and gives due consideration to the hadīth in his reasoning and argument. 50

Al-Awzā'ī (d.157 A.H.), an early faqīh and muhaddith, says that the opinion of a faqīh, and his actions, must be in conformity with the hadīth and that the faqīh had no option to apply any other method of reasoning when there was a clear hadīth available to him. Al-Awzā'ī was himself extremely ³Husayn b. Alī Al-Saymarī, Akhbār Abī Hanīfah wa Ashābuhū, (Beirut: Dār al-Kitāb al-Arabī, 1976) 10-11; Nu mān b. Thābit Abū Hanīfah, Musnad al-Imām Abī Hanīfah, ed. Safwah al-Saqā, (Maktabah al-Rabī', Allepo, 1382 A.H.) 4-5.

¹⁶Ibn al-Qayyim, Tlām, vol. 1, 77.

¹⁷Abū Hanīfah, Musnad, 4--5.

⁴⁸Abū Yūsuf, al-Kharāj, 19-20.

^{4&}quot;Ihid, 19-20.

⁵⁰Muhammad b. al-Hassan Al-Shaybānī, Kitāb al-Ast, ed. Abu al-Wafā' al-Afghānī, (Hyderabad: Dā'irat al-Ma'ārif al-Nu'māniyyah, 1386 A.H.) vol. 3, 40-45, 74ff.

⁵¹Baltajī, Muhammad, Manāhij al-Tashrī, (Riyādh: Jāmi ah al-Imām Ibn Sa'ūd, 1397 A.H.) vol. 1, 445.

و rasailojaraid.com بوج تقتی مخذ فقه اسلای had received from him to those who were not present there.40 Imām al-Shāfī'ī related a hadīth on the authority of 'Abd Allah b. Mas'ūd, which states: May Allah cause the one to flourish who listened to and preserved my words and then passed them on to others exactly as he heard them. 41

DISCUSSIONS OF THE FUOAHĀ' 1.1

The early Fugaha' had also accepted the Sunnah to be an independent or original source of law. The Hanafi, Mālikī, Shāfi'ī and Hanbalī jurists have unanimously agreed on the binding legal validity of the Sunnah second only to the Our'an, for the Qur'an itself states: "Whoever has obeyed the Messenger has obeyed Allah". There are also other verses commanding the Muslims to accept legal authority of the Sunnah. 42

Ibn Abī Layla (d.148 A.H.), an early faqīli, whose fight views are mostly recorded by al-Sarakhsī and Ibn Oudāmah. recognizes the Sunnah as a source of the Shari ah. 43 Likewise. Zayd b. 'Ali (d.122 A.H.) who is a contemporary faqili of Imam Abū Hanīfah, Imām Mālik and Ibn Abī Layla, admits the Sunnah to be a fundamental source of law, Al-Majm \bar{u} , which is attributed to him, makes it clear that the Sunnali is a basic source to him and that his legal interpretations are based on the ahadith which had reached him mostly on the authority of Ali b. Abi Tālib.44

Abū Hanīfah (d.150 A.H.) had reportedly referred, first, to the Our'an and, second to the Sunnah in all those cases on [&]quot;Ibid. 26.

⁴¹Al-Shātī'ī, al-Risālah, 175; al-Dārimī, Sunan, vol. 1, 75; Muhammad b. Yazīd ibn Mājah, Sunan Ibn Mājah, (Cairo: Dār Ihyā Kutub al- Arabiyya, 1372 A.H.) vol.1, 84; Ahmad b. Hanbal, Musnad, vol. 1, 437.

⁴²Qur'ān 4: 80.

⁴³Al-Sarakhsī, al-Mabsūt, vol. 13, 13; vol. 15, 134.

⁴⁴Zayd b. 'Alī, Musnad Zayd b. 'Alī (Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-'Ilmiyyab, 1403 A.H.).

علمى وتحقيقى محلّمه فقداسلام

Thus, we see that the Companions as well as al-Khulafa' al-Rashidin preserved the Sunnah in their daily lives. According to Ahmad b. Hanbal, 'Imran b. Husayn said that the Our'an was revealed to the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) and the Sunnah was established by him and that they were preserved by the Companions: therefore, the people should follow them. "By Allah", he said, "if the people would not do so they would go astray". 36 The Companions not only preserved the Sunnah but also transmitted and taught others around them. During the life-time of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.), his Sunnah was followed and the Qur'an was memorized and transmitted as they were revealed. Ahmad b. Hanbal relates that a delegation of 'Abd al-Qays came to the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) in the 10th year after the Hijrah and embraced Islam. They spent ten days in Madīnah Munawwarah with the Muslims' learning the Din of Islam from the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) and his Companions.³⁷ The Prophet (p.b.u.h.), one day, asked them about their stay and treatment by their Madinian hosts. The people of 'Abd al-Qays said that they had come across the best of brothers who had provided them with comfortable lodging, delicious food and who, in addition, had spent their days and nights teaching them the Book of Allah and the Sunnah of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.).38 The process of transmitting dealings and knowledge to others made it easy for the Companions and al-Khulafā' al-Rāshidūn to ascertain the Sunnah regarding any matter under consideration and to act accordingly. The Prophet (p.b.u.h.) himself directed the people to transmit knowledge from him even if it is one verse. 39 At the gathering at 'Arafat during the Farewell Hajj the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) delivered the Khutbah in which he commanded the people to convey the message they [&]quot;Ibid, 445.

³⁷Al-Bukhārī, al-Şaḥū, vol.1, part 1, 32; Ibn Ḥajar al-'Asqalānī, Fath al-Bārī (Cairo: Mustafā al-Bābī al-Ḥabī, 1378 A.H.) vol. 1, 193; vol. 16, 373; Ibn 'Abd al-Wahhāb, Nihayat, Al-Nuwayrī, Ahmad, Al-Arah fī Funūn al-Adah, (Mu'assasat al-Misriyyah al-'Ānmah, Cairo; n.d) vol. 18, 65-67.

³⁸Ahmad b, Hanbal, Musnad, vol. 4, 206.

¹⁹Al-Bukhāri, al-Ṣaḥīḥ, part 1, 207.

Ibn Hazm says that all the Companions and their successors agreed on the authority of the Sunnah. Whenever something happened they used to inquire as to the ruling given by the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) in that particular case, and then followed his example.30 This statement is confirmed by Al-Āmidī who records the consensus of the Companions as to the authority and validity of the Sunnah as a basic source of figh. 31 Al-Zuhrī (d.125 A.H.), an early muhaddith, says that the close followers of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) who had knowledge before him (Al-Zuhrī) firmly believed that success in the next world depended on following the Sunnah. 32 This means that the Companions and their successors (Tābi un) gave due consideration to the Sunnah and understood their responsibilities accordingly. To quote the Qur'an, "Whoever does not believe in Allah and His Messenger, we have prepared a blaze for those who deny".33 The verse, "Certainly there is a good example for whoever looks to Allah and the Last Day and invokes the name of Allah much", according to Al-Khatīb al-Baghdādī, made them refer to the actions of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) in all problems in which there was no clear direction, since the actions of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) were regarded the embodiment of the Sharī'ah by the Companions.³⁴ 'Ali, for example, had detailed records in writing about the rules of sadaqat (zakāh and charity) which he called Sahīfah, and from which he used to teach and administer the rules of sadaqāt.35 This Sahīfah was one of his most valued possessions which he always kept with him in the sheath of his sword.

Mabsūț²(Beirut: Dăr al-Ma'rifah, n.d.) vol. 9, 37-52.

Muhan mad b. Alī Ibn Hazm, al-Iḥkām fī Uṣūl al-Iḥkām, ed. Aḥmad Shakir (Cairo: Mati h al-Āṣimah, 1968) vol. 1, 102.

¹¹ΛΙ-Āmidī, al-Ilņkām, vol. 1, 253-54.

³²Al-Dārimī, Sunan, vol. 1; 45.

³³Our'an 48:13.

³⁴Al-Khatīb al-Baghdādī, al-Faqīh, vol.1, 131; for the verse of the Qur'ān, see al-Qur'ān 33:21.*

³⁵Ahmad b. Hanbal, Musnad, vol. 1, 100.

rasailojaraid.com هنگ نومر۲۰۱۳ ملی و تحقیق مجلّه فقداسلای هنگ نومر۲۰۱۳ هنگه نومر۲۰۱۳ ه

when he heard the relevant hadūth from Abū Sa'īd al-Khudrī—viz., that the transaction of money-changing should be from hand to hand and equal in weight.²⁴

The Companions who were strong in their understanding of Islam, and who were in a position to give opinions concerning the Shari'ah, considered the Sunnah the best way to live. 'Abd Allah b. Mas'ūd had reportedly advised those who were in a position to make judgement, to make their decisions in accordance with the Our an and the Sunnah.25 Another eminent Companion, 'Abd Allah b, 'Abbas, whenever he was asked a question, would answer from the Our'an and the Sunnah. Ibn 'Abbas also took the judgements of Abu Bakr and 'Umar into consideration because he was certain that these judgements were based on the Our an and the Sunnah. 26 Both of these last named Companions are regarded to be the fugahā' of the Rashidum times.27 Mu adh b. Jabal, another Companion faqih, was advised by the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) to refer to and follow the Sunnah as a source and evidence of the verdict of Shari'ah 28

Another example is to be found in the hadd punishment for adultery committed by a married person, which is stoning to death. This punishment is not stipulated in the Qur'ān, but it was a Sunnah of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.), and this was not abandoned by the Khulafā. 'Umar insists on stoning to death the married person who committed adultery, and 'Alī enforced this punishment saying that it was upheld by the Sunnah.²⁹

²⁴lbid, 140-41.

²⁵Al-Dārimī, Sunan, vol. 1, 59; al-Shātibī, al-Muwāfaqāt, vol. 4, 6.

^{2&}quot;Ibid.

²⁷Ahmad b. Abī Ya'qūb Al-Ya'qūbī Tārīkh al-Yā qūbī, (Beirut: Dār Sādir, 1379 A.H.) vol. 2, 138-61.

²⁸ Muhammad b. 'Ísā Al-Tirmidhī Sunan al-Tirmidhī (Hims: Dār al-Da'wah) vol. 5, 8-9; Abū Dāwūd, Sunan Ahī Dāwūd, ed. 'Izzat 'Ubayd (M. 'Alī Al-Sayyid, Hims, 1388-Å.H.) vol. 4, 18-19; Al-Dārimī, Sunan, vol. 1, 60.

²⁹Al-Bukhārī, Sahāh, vol. 3, Part 8, 204; al-Dārimī, Sunan, vol. 2, 179. For the views of fuqahā, see Mālik, al-Muwattā, vol. 2, 165-68; al-Māwardī, al-Ahkām al-Sultāniyyah, 223-25; Abū Ya'lā Ibn al-Farrā, al-Ahkām al-Sultāniyah, ed. M.H. al-Fiqī, (Cairo: Mustafa al-Bābī al-Halabī, 1386 Å.H.) 263-64; Muhammad b. Ahmad al-Sarakhsī, al-

على وتحقیق مُلِّه فقد اسلامی rasailojaraid.com على وقتیق مُلِّه فقد اسلامی

declared that he had appointed the governors in various cities to teach the people their Dīn and the Sunnah. 19

In 17 A.H., 'Umar designated Abū Musa as Governor of Baṣrah, and advised him especially on holding fast to the Sunnah. Abū Mūsā requested the Khalīfah to send along some of the Companions to help him and teach the people. 'Umar allowed him to select whom he liked to accompany him to Baṣrah. Abū Mūsā selected twenty-nine Companions including Anas b. Mālik, 'Imrān b. Ḥuṣayn and Hāshim b. 'Amīr.²⁰

When 'Umar expelled the people of Najran from the Peninsula of Arabia, he made it clear that the decision was taken in accordance with the will of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.). The Prophet (p.b.u.h.) is reported to have said in his last days of life that two religions should not exist in the Arabian Peninsula.²¹ Upon being chosen as Khalīfah, 'Ali b. Abī Tālib, likewise, directed the people to hold fast to the Book of Allah and the Sunnah, in his first khutbah in Madinah al-Munawwarah. He also referred to the meticulousness with which Abu Bakr and 'Umar had followed the Sunnah.22 Like al-Khulafā al-Rāshidūn, other prominent Companions also emphasised to follow the Sunnah. For instance, 'Abd Allah b. 'Umar, who had rented out agricultural lands belonging to his family, was not sure whether such renting out was permitted or otherwise. On being told by Rāfi' b. Khadīj, that such renting out was prohibited by the Prophet (p.b.u.h.), 'Abd Allah gave up renting of his lands.23 Likewise, 'Abd Allah b, 'Abbas had his own opinion about bay'al-sarf (money-changing), but he changed it ¹⁹Abū Yūsuf, Kitāb al-Kharāj, (Cairo: Maktabah al-Salafiyyah, 1976) 15; al-Ţabarī, Tārīkh, vol. 4, 204; Ibn Sa'd, al-Ţabaqāt al-Kubrā (Cairo: Dār al-Taḥrīr, 1388 A.H.) vol. 3, 201; Ibn Taymiyyah, al-Siyūsah al-Shar'iyyah, ed, 'Alī b. Muhammad al-Maghribī (Kuwait: Dār al-Arqam, 1406 A.H.) 39.

²⁰Λl-Ţabarī, Tārīkh, vol. 4, 70-71; Ibn al-Λthīr, al-Kāmil, vol. 2, 541.

²¹Al-Țabarī, Tūrīkh, vol. 4, 446.

²²Al-Muttaqī al-Hindī, Kanz al-Ummāl, vol. 4, 445; Ibn Abd Rabbih, al-'lqd, vol. 4, 66.

²³Al-Khatīb al-Baghdādī, al-Faqili, vol. 1, 140.

a case, used to have a bath, 'Umar and the other Companions adopted the same practice.¹⁵ Imām al-Shāfi'ī states that 'Umar pronounced that fifteen camels should be given towards compensation for the loss of a thumb, and for the loss of other fingers he prescribed different numbers. 'Umar then found a written hadūh with the family of 'Amr b. Hazm which showed that ten camels should be given for every finger. 'Umar immediately withdrew his decision and implemented the Prophet's decision.¹⁶

'Umar not only practised the Sumnah himself, but also instructed his governors and judges to do the same. When giving instructions on how to decide cases, 'Umar wrote to Abū Musā al-Ash'arī that he should look first into the Qur'ān and the Sumnah of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.), and in case of failing to find a ruling in the Qur'ān and the Sumnah he should try to look for similar cases and precedents from these sources, reach a decision through analogy.¹⁷ In a letter to Shurayh who was appointed a judge by 'Umar, he gave him clear directions for judging and settling matters according to the Qur'ān and the Sumnah, says al Dārimī.¹⁸

All this indicates the measure of 'Umar's commitment to ensuring that the Sunnah was preserved and practised. Governors and administrators were under an obligation to teach the people al-Din and the Sunnah. According to Imām Abū Yūsuf and Al-Ṭabarī, 'Umar, in one of his Friday addresses, ¹⁵Al-Āmidī, Abū al-Hasan b. Abū 'Alī, al-Ilikām fi Usūl al-Alikām, (Matba ah al-Ma'āril, Cairo, 1332 A.H.) vol. 1, 253-54.

¹⁶Muḥammad b. Idrīs Al-Shāfi'ī, al-Risālah (Cairo: Muṣtatā al-Bābī al-Halabī 1969) 183; al-Khatīb al-Baghdādī, al-Faqīh, vol. 1, 134-35.

¹⁷Abū 'Uthmān 'Amr b. Baḥr, Al-Jāḥiz, al-Bayān wa al-Tabyān, ed. A. Salām M. Harūn, Mu'assasat al-Khānjī, 1367 A.H.) vol. 2, 49; al-Māwardī, al-Aḥkām al-Sulṭāniyah (Cairo: Muṣṭafā al-Bābī al-Halabī) 71; Muḥammad b. Khalaf Wakī', Akhbār al-Qudāt (Beirut: 'Ālam al-Kutub, n.d.) vol. 1, 238-84; 'Alī b. 'Umar al-Dāraqutnī, Sunan al-Daraqutnī (Beirut: Dār al-Muḥāsin, 1386 A.H.) vol. 4, 206-7.

¹⁸Al-Dārimī, Sunan, vol. 1, 60; Wakīr, Akhbār al-Qudāt, vol. 2, 189-90; al-Bayhaqī, al-Sunan al-Kubrā, (Hyderabad Dakkan: Dā'rat al-Ma'āril, 1344 A.H.) vol. 10, 110; Ibn al-Qayyim, Tlām, vol. 1, 61-62; Abū Ishāq Ibrāhīm b. Mūsā al-Shātibī, al-Muvrāfaqāt (Cairo: Matba'ah M. 'Alī Şabīh, 1969/70) vol. 4, 6; al-Muttaqī al-Hindī, Kanz al-Ummāl, vol. 5, 481-82.

share. Muhammad b. Muslimah confirmed his being witness to this particular Sunnah. Abū Bakr then gave the woman one-sixth share in the inheritance. 'Umar pronounced the like decision in a similar case during his Khilāfah, according to al-Shawkānī.¹⁰

Once the issue as to how Magians should be treated came under discussion. Abū Bakr discussed the matter with the Companions, and he was informed by 'Abd al-Rahmān b. 'Awf of the hadāth which calls for Magian to be treated as Ahl al-Kitāb. Abū Bakr then, allowed them the rights and obligations enjoyed by the ahl al-Kitāb under Islam." Ibn Sīrīn also states that Abū Bakr would use reasoning or exercise rā'v only in eases where he failed to find answers in the two basic sources the Qur'ān and the Sunnah.

'Umar b. al-Khattāb also considered the Sumalı to be binding, and followed it like his predecessor. Mahrān b. Maymun covers in his report cited above that 'Umar followed the Sumalı in the same way as Abū Bakr did.¹³ According to observation of Ibn Qutaybah, 'Umar was very strict in following his two predecessors, the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) and Abū Bakr, and followed them as a weaned camel follows its mother.¹⁴ The early fuqahā' have recorded many instances wherein 'Umar invoked the Sumalı to settle cases. Al-Āmidī narrates the procedure followed by 'Umar in settling the question as to whether a person who ends his sexual intercourse with his wife without ejaculation had to have a bath or not. Some of the Companions were in favour while others not. 'Umar then sent a lady to Ā'ishah, to enquire about the practice of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.). Upon being told that the Prophet (p.b.u.h.), in such ¹⁰Al-Shawkānī, Nayl al-Artār, vol. 6, 175.

¹¹ Alī b. Habīb Al-Māwardī, Adab al-Qādī, ed. Muḥyi Hilāl al-Sarhān (Baghdad, 1971) vol. 1, 614-15.

¹²lbn al-Qayyim, I lām, vol. 1, 54.

¹³Al-Dārimī, Sunan, vol. 1, 58; Ibn al-Qayyim, I'lūm, vol. 1, 62; al-Muttaqī al-Hindī, Kanz al- Ummāl (Hyderabad: Dā'irat al-Ma'āril al- Uthmāniyah, 1374 A.H.) vol. 5, 348-49.

¹⁴ Abd Allah b. Muslim, Ibn Qutaybah, al-Imāmah wa al-Siyāsah, ed. Tāhā M. al-Zaynī (Beirut: Mu'assasah al-Ilalabi, reprint of Cairo edition of 1967) vol. 1, 26.

swore that he would do exactly what he had observed the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) doing.8

Al-Dārimī delicate the approach of Abū Bakr when dealing with legal and social issues. This was quite similar to that adopted by the fugaha in the later period because they followed the example of al-Khulafā al-Rāshidūn. On the authority of Mahran b. Maymun, whenever a dispute arose, or any issue was taken to Abū Bakr for settlement, he looked into the Qur'an first to find a solution; and in cases where no solution could be found, he referred to the Sunnah of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) and settled the matter accordingly. In case he was not sure of his knowledge of the Sunnah on any particular issue, he would call the Companions and ask them about the Prophet's Sunnah on that particular issue, and would decide the matter in accordance with the Sunnah. However, if he was unable to arrive at a decision or the Companions could not cite any relevant saying from the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) concerning the issue, he would summon the leaders and notables to discuss to the matter with them."

Al-Māwardī refers to some cases in which Abū Bakr consulted the Companions in order to know the Sunnah. For instance, in the case of inheritance by a grandmother, when Abū Bakr was told that the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) gave her one-sixth, he decided accordingly. Al-Shawkānī discusses the same issue in detail. A grandmother came to Abū Bakr and asked him for her share in an inheritance. Abū Bakr told her that he did not find any share assigned in the Qur'ān, nor did he know of anything in the Suinnah. However, he asked her to come back after some days. Meanwhile, upon consulting the Companions, he was told by Mughīrah b. Shu bah that he had been present when the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) granted a grandmother one-sixth of a share. Abū Bakr then asked Mughīrah whether there was anyone else who witnessed the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) giving her one-sixth of the 🖈 امام ما لك بن انس رحمة الله عليه كي ولا دت س ٩٣ جحرى ميس اور وفات ٩ ١١ جحرى ميس موتى _

^{*}Al-Tabarī, Tārīkh, vol. 3, 207-8.

Al-Dārimī, Abū Muhammad Abd Allah, Sunan al-Dārimī (Beirut: Dār al-Kutub al-Himiyyah, n.d) vol. 1, 58; Ibn al-Qayyim, Flām al-Muwaqqi in, ed. M. Muhyi al-Dīn Abd al-Hāmid. (Beirut: Dār al-Jīl, 1300 A.H.) vol. 1, 62.

& 9m

علمى وتحقيق مجلّه فقداسلامي

he would still send out the army of Usāmah.⁴ Abū Bakr also displayed his firmness in following the command of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) when he was approached by some Companions who requested him to appoint someone older and more experienced to lead the army instead of Usāmah, as he was a youth of about twenty and his command included many older Companions, Abū Bakr again plainly refused to make any change in the Prophet's decision to send the force under Usāmah.⁵ Similarly, Abū Bakr remained firm in his stand against the tribes who refused to pay zakāh to the Khalīfah but assuring loyalty and adherence to the faith of Islām. The Khalīfah rejected their demand outright, saying, "If you withhold even the tether of a tithed camel, I will fight against you for the same".⁶ In this way, he successfully restored the practice of collecting and establishing the institution of zakāh.

Yet another instance of his commitment to the Sunnah may be found when the question regarding the inheritance of the estate of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) arose. According to the Sharī ah, it should have been distributed among the legal heirs, but Abū Bakr based his ruling on the hadāth of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) that the estates of the Messengers of Allah should be distributed as charity. When 'Abbās and Fāṭimah approached him for their share from the land of Fadak and Khaybar, Abū Bakr recounted to them what the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) had said viz., that the Messengers of Allāh did not make anyone the inheritors of their property and that whatever was left by them was considered sadaqah. According to Al-Ṭabarī also Abū Bakr was so determined to follow the Sunnah of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) that he ⁴Al-Tabarī, Tārīkh, vol. 3, 225.

^{&#}x27;Ibid, 226; Ibn al-Athir, al-Kāmil, vol. 2, 335.

[&]quot;Muslim, Sahih, vol. 1, 38. Al-Tabarī, Tārikh, vol. 3, 244; Ibn al-Athīr, al-Kāmil, vol. 2, 335.

⁷Mälik b. Anas, al-Muvattā', (Cairo: Muṣṭatā al-Bābī al-Halabī, n.d) vol.1, 335; Muḥammad b. 'Alī al-Shawkānī, Nayl al-dwtār (Beirut: Dār al-Jīl, 1973) vol. 6, 196-97; Z.I. Anṣārī, The Early Development of Figh in Kūfā (Ph. D. thesis, McGill University, 1966.) 67-68.

علمى وتحقيقي مجله فقداسلامي

be binding. According to Ibn 'Abd Rabbih, Abū Bakr delivered a khutbah (sermon) in which he directed the people to follow the Messenger of Allah, arguing on the basis of Qur'anic verses which laid down that obedience to the Messenger is, in fact, obedience to Allah.²

Abū Bakr's strict adherence to the Sunnah during his tenure as Khalifah cannot be gainsaid. An instance in point is his decision, the first one he took as Khalifah, to despatch an army under the command of Usamah against the tribes who turned to unbelief. It is worth noting that the political situation, being rather acute, called for extreme caution. Many tribes who had accepted Islam shortly before the Prophet's death were not sufficiently committed in their faith, and returned to disbelie? after his death. A number of other tribes such as the Ghassan. the Banu Asad and the Banu Hanifah remained in the fold of Islam, but refused to pay zakāh to the Khalīfah; they rebelled against the authority of the Khalifah. The developing situation was explosive enough to unnerve even some senior Companions who advised the Khalifah to postpone the dispatch of Usamah for the time being. These Companions, 'Umar included, gave priority to the defence of Madinah; they wanted the Khalifah to keep the army in Madīnah to defend it against any possible attack.

Abū Bakr, however, would not deviate from what he considered the Sunnah of the Prophet (p.b.u.h). He declared: "By Allah in whose hand is my life, even if I knew that the beast would grab me, I would still certainly despatch the army of Usāmah as the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) directed". The key words here are, "as the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) directed", and they indicate the measure of his steadfastness to follow the Sunnah. This momentous declaration was supplemented by another equally important one that even if he was the only one left in the town, ²Ibn 'Abd Rabbih al-Iqd al-Farid (Cairo: Lajnat al-Ta'lif wa-al-Tarjumah, 1384 A.H.) vol. 1, 61.

Al-Tabarī, Tārīkh, vol.3, 225; Ibn al-Athīr, al-Kāmil, (Beirut: Dār al-Kitā b al-'Arabī, 1387 A.H.) vol. 2, 334; al-Dhahabī, M.B. Ahmad, Tārīkh al-Islam (Cairo: Matba'ah el-Quós, n.d) vol. 3, 14-15.

محرم الحرام ۳۳۷ماره ⇔نومه ۲۰۱۲.

علمى وتحقيق مجلّه فقداسلامي

AUTHORITY OF THE SUNNAH

The word Sunnah literally means a norm, usage sanctioned by tradition, or the customary practice of a person or group of people. However, it has come to refer almost exclusively to the practice of the Messenger of Allah in the literature of the early muhaddithūn and fuqahā'. In the early years of Islam the practice of setting apart the Sunnah of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.) from the Sunnah of the Companions or that of the tribes or of particular people was not in vogue. However, a study of the early hadūh literature indicates that there was an increasing tendency to use the phrase, "Sunnah of the Prophet" (p.b.u.h.) and it occurs quite frequently. By the time of fuqahā', al-Sunnah was a well-established term attributed exclusively to the Messenger of Allah.

Abū Bakr, upon his being chosen as Khalījah, lost no time in showing his intention to follow the Book of Allah and the Sunnah of the Prophet (p.b.u.h.), "Obey me as long as I obey Allah and His Messenger" he declared, "And if I disobey Allah and His Messenger you are under no obligation to obey me". The gathering to which these words were conveyed comprised Muhājirūn and Anṣār, and they all acclaimed his statement. This meant that not only Abū Bakr but also the Companions, who were present on this historic occasion, considered the Sunnah to ¹Ibn Hishām, al-Sīrah al-Nabawiyyah, ed. Khalīl Harrās, (Cairo: Maktabah al-Jumhuriyyah) ol.4, 457; al-Tabarī, Tārīkh, (Cairo: Dār al-Ma'ārit, 1961) vol. 3, 210; Ibn Qutaybah, 'Uyūn al-khbūr (Cairo: al-Mu'assasah al-Miṣriyyah al-'Āmmah, 1383 A.H.) vol.2, 234.

ماحرم اخذہ حرم اعطاؤہ کم جم برکالین وام ہا بھی وام ہے۔ کم rasallojaraid.com